Women's Auxiliary Luncheon for the Children of Saint Basil's Academy

On Sunday March 26th, the Women's Auxiliary of the Chian Federation, hosted the children of Saint Basil's Academy, to a fun afternoon of food and dancing at the Chian Federation. All the children of the Academy as well as the over 150 Chians who attended the event, had a great time. All food and pastries were donated by various restaurants which allowed the Women's Auxiliary to donate all the proceeds from the event directly to the children.

New York Greek Independence Day Parade

The unusually mild and sunny weather, for this time of year, in New York, permitted tens of thousands of Greek to participate at the annual Greek Independence Day Parade up Manhattan's Fifth Avenue on Sunday April 2nd.

The Chians once again, just as every year, gave their best to present a large number of marchers. A few hundred Chians, marched behind the float representing the fire-ship of the great naval hero of the Greek War of Independence, Konstantinos Kanaris. As in the past few years, ALL Chians marched together under the Auspices of the Chios Societies of America and Canada.

Unfortunately the great display of the Chians was missed by most viewing the Parade since we were one of the last organizations to march. What's even more unfortunate, as we passed the stands for the dignitaries, to our surprise the stands were mostly empty. Many of our members raised the question (to which we couldn't find a good answer): "if the Greek and American dignitaries and church officials could not watch the whole parade, shouldn't at least some members of the Board of the Federation of Hellenic Societies, the organizers of the Parade, remain behind to observe the fine work done by those marching?"

After the Parade, all participants, were hosted at the Cultural Center of the Chian Federation where the Women's Auxiliary provided lunch and coffee.

Chian Dance Groups Perform at Nursing Homes

This past Saturday, April 8th, the Dance Groups of the Women's Auxiliary of the Chian Federation continued their program, which 1788, spent most of his life as an expatriate in Paris. A classical scholar and philosopher, Korais was repelled by the Byzantine influence in Greek society and was a fierce critic of the ignorance of the clergy and their subservience to the Ottoman Empire. He realized that education was a precursor to Greek liberation. He invented Katharevousa a cleansed form of the ancient Greek language. Korais had extensive ties with Chios and in his will bequeathed his extensive library to Chios.

Did You Know...

... the pilot of the first ship to circumnavigate the globe was Chian? His name was Francisco Albo. On August 10, 1519, Magellan sailed from Seville with five ships and a crew of 243 men, seven of them Greek, to find a passage linking the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The ships were the Trinidad, the San Antonio, the Concepcion, the Santiago, and the Victoria. All seven Greek sailors who began the voyage survived. Three of them were on board the Victoria: pilot Francisco Albo from Chios, pilot's assistant Miguel de Rodas and sailor Miguel Sanchez de Rodas, both from Rhodes.

In September 1522, the started last spring, performing for the less fortunate among us. The youngest and middle groups performed at the Ozanam Hall of the Queens Nursing Home in Bayside. This innovative program, has met with positive response from the residents of the institutions the Dance Groups perform. More performances by all the Dance Groups, are scheduled until the end of June.

Just as last year, our Dance Group has been invited to perform in front of 70,000 Mets fans on Friday June 16th, during Greek Night at Shea Stadium. In addition, as in years past, we can look forward to stellar performances this Sunday when all Groups perform at the Annual Palm Sunday Luncheon organized by the Women's Auxiliary of the Chian Federation.

CHAPTER VI.

A.D. 1453 - 1477.

The Justinianis, anticipating the evils that would befall them, wrote (14th August, 1455) a letter to the Pope Callixtus III, in which they implored his assistance, and begged him to declare a crusade against the enemies of the Cross. At the end of the letter, they said that, if their prayers remained unanswered, calling upon the Supreme Judge to witness their abandonment, they would fight for their faith, up to their last breath.⁽⁶⁾ The Doge of Genoa, Peter Fregoso, sent two ships and 500 men to their assistance, as well as corn, and a good supply of other munitions of war (1456).⁽⁷⁾ But the Justinianis seeing, on one side, the terrible dissensions between Genoa and Alfonso King of Sicily, on the other, that Mahomet, having conquered Enos and the neighbouring islands of Thasos and Samothrace, was preparing to march against Chios in the spring, again sent him ambassadors, to try and divert the now close approaching storm. Mahomet, being satisfied with the payment of 30,000 ducats for the sunken ship, and a tribute of 10,000 florins, turned his arms against Lemnos, which he took, and postponed the conquest of Chios and Lesbos to some future time.⁽⁸⁾ Next year, some months after the Crusaders, led by the ever victorious Hunyadi, had defeated Mahomet at Belgrade, sixteen Papal ships, commanded by the Cardinal Ludovic Scarampa, appeared in the Aegean, coming to the assistance of the more important islands. Dropping anchor off Chios, the Cardinal urged the Chian authorities to refuse payment of the tribute to the Sultan (1457); but they, fearing the vengeance of the Turks, after the departure of the Papal fleet, refused to listen.⁽⁹⁾ (Who could have foreseen that after a lapse of 364 years this situation would be repeated?) Time showed that their fears were well grounded, for the Sultan, leaving them unmolested, sent his fleet to Lemnos, and punished it for having listened to the advice of Scarampa. The Justinianis, however, seeing that Mahomet had conquered Lesbos, fearing the same fate, and no longer being able to expect help from Genoa, on account of her own troubles, appealed to the Pope, Pius II.⁽¹⁰⁾ They also began further fortifying their city, to enable it to offer the longest possible resistance to the great forces of their oppressor. The Pope, being without money, had to have recourse to his spiritual treasury, and promised indulgences to all who should go to the assistance of Chios! The Chians, however, hampered both by civil dissension⁽¹¹⁾ and lack of money for their work of fortification, again sent envoys to Genoa, praying for help. The Genoese, who had just lost their rich colony of Kaffa on the Taman Chersonese (1474), fearing to lose Chios also, ordered four ships (two of which belonged to the Justinianis and the other two to Victoria docked in Seville after being at sea for three years. The 18 sailors aboard who had survived the journey were the first men in history to circumnavigate the globe on a ship piloted by a Chian. Much which is known about the three-year voyage of discovery comes from Francisco Albo's pilot log.

A faithful reproduction of the Victoria which is currently sailing around the world, visited the largest port of Greece Pireas, in honor of the Greek contribution to the original voyage, two weeks week ago.

Chios Quote

“ It is now half a century since the name of Scio rang through the civilized world as the theatre of a deed which Turkish history itself can scarcely parallel, and the island is vigorously regaining its prosperity. It only needs to recall the outlines of the story. The fertile island, which is four times the extent of the Isle of Wight, was the home of one hundred and ten thousand inhabitants, of whom only six thousand were Turks. The Greeks of Scio were said to differ physically and morally from all their kindred; their merchants were princes at home and abroad, art and literature flourished, with grace and refinement of manner, and there probably nowhere existed a society more industrious, gay, contented, and intelligent. Tempted by some adventurers from Samos to rebel, they drew down upon themselves the vengeance of the Turks. The city of Scio, with its thirty thousand inhabitants, and seventy villages, were reduced to ashes; twenty-five thousand of all ages and both sexes were slain, forty-five thousand were carried away as slaves, among them women and children who had been reared in luxury, and most of the remainder escaped, in a destitute state, Negri and Spinola, rich citizens of Genoa) to go to the help of Chios. Three years later too, they sent Francesco Sofia, Professor of Law, to the Pope, Sixtus IV, for pecuniary assistance, and received 5,000 scudi⁽¹²⁾ (1477). That the sovereignty of the island was considered a valuable asset to Genoa, was shown some sixteen years later. Hearing from the Genoese, in Galata, that the Turks were preparing a formidable fleet to conquer the island, they called a council, in which it was decided to arm five large ships to send 5,000 men, in addition to sailors, and to give the command to Thomas Justiniani Forneti. But Thomas arriving in Chios, found quiet and peace reigning there because the Turks, altering their plans, had again deferred their expedition against Chios to a more favourable occasion, as we shall hereafter see. At this time it is possible that, then serving as a simple sailor, Christopher Columbus may have set his foot on Chios.⁽¹³⁾ into other parts of Greece. At the end of the summer's harvest of death, only two thousand Sciotes were left on the island. ”

 (10) The Pope was so zealous in his desire to free the Christians from their slavery under the Turks, that he even conceived the extraordinary idea of writing a letter to the Sultan Mahomet himself, trying to convert him to Christianity by force of argument. In order to convince him, he not only quoted arguments from the Apostles and Fathers of the Church, but even resorted to the profane faith of Solon and Lycurgus; and, in order to rouse his ambition, quoted Constantine the Great, who after being baptised and armed with the symbol of the Cross, became ever victorious and Ruler of the whole inhabited world. (Mich. "Hist. Crois," vol. VIII, p. 375).
 (11) These dissensions between the Maonenses and the Latin Bishop, Hieronymus Camolli, arose over the confiscated ecclesiastical property of the Greek conspirators, (of which we have made mention earlier). Eventually they referred the matter to the Pope Sixtus IV., who decided (1473) that the Maonenses should return possession of the property, but pay the Bishop a perpetual annual sum of 400 ducats, and a further single sum of 100 ducats, for the restoration of the Episcopal Church.
